This is a play you've been doing all along.

B
How can you be so sure?

I've seen it firsthand.

B
The play?

Pretty much, yes.

B
I don't believe you. What have I been doing that's so dramatic?

A
Not every play is dramatic.

B
You know what I meant.

A
Are you hungry?

B
Maybe.

A
Are you hungry?

B
I could eat. Are you hungry?

A
Yes.

B
What do you want?

A sandwich.

B
That's surprising.

A
Will you make it for me?

Why?

A
I have a surprise for you. If you make this sandwich for me, I'll give you the surprise.

B
Oh really?

A
Will you make it for me?

B
What do you want?

Just something spreadable on bread.

B
Like peanut butter?

Sure.

B
What if I'm allergic to peanut butter? I assume you're not allergic to peanut butter.

A
It's not a big deal exactly what it is as long as it's something you can spread. Like peanut butter, but not necessarily peanut butter itself.

B
Okay.

A
Can I watch you while you make it?

B
Sure.

A Thanks.

B
What are you doing?

A
I'm dancing.

B
Are you?

A
Yes.

B
You're just kind of mimicking my movements.

A
Same thing.

B
Is it?

A Arguably.

B
If you were going to mime making a sandwich, why don't you just make the sandwich?

A
That's not the point.

B
What is the point?

A
Can you keep spreading that peanut butter back and forth? I'm going to try and see how close I can get to doing the same thing.

B
Without the peanut butter and without the bread?

A
Exactly.

B
Okay.

A
Okay, I think I've got it. You can stop spreading.

B
Okay.

A
Now, step away from the sandwich and try and mimic my spreading motion.

B
But weren't you copying me? I should just do what I was doing.

A
Think of it like whisper down the lane. Look at everything I'm doing right now and try and do it yourself.

B
Okay. Should I shift my weight like you're doing?

A
Am I shifting my weight?

B
I think so.

A Okay.

B
Alright, now I'm going. Now what?

A
Now, I'll try and take it back. Keep going so I can watch you.

B
Okay.

A
I feel like the other arm is getting involved, too. Alright, I'm good. Now you take it back.

B
Okay. I'm gonna add another little move.

A
Go for it.

B
Alright. Now you take it back.

A
Okay. We can do it together now.

B
Eight more times.

A
Okay.

B
Eight. Seven. Six. Five. Four. Three. Two. One. Zero.

A
Okay.

B
Now, I'm hungry.

A
Do you want a sandwich?
